Subject: Next Generation Compliance Air Compendium

Janet McCabe and I are pleased to share with all of you the "Compendium of Next Generation Compliance Examples in Clean Air Act Programs," which shows how EPA, state, and local air agencies are modernizing their air programs to improve compliance, reduce pollution, increase transparency and reduce burdens through the use of Next Generation Compliance principles and tools. This document was developed jointly by the Office of Enforcement and Compliance Assurance and the Office of Air and Radiation.

Next Generation Compliance promotes new monitoring and information technology and expanded transparency through regulations and permits along with innovative enforcement to improve compliance and reduce pollution. The Compendium presents real-world examples of how these approaches have been implemented by states, local governments and EPA. This Compendium provides information about Next Generation Compliance in practice today, and should facilitate conversations among environmental regulators to think creatively about how to leverage Next Generation Compliance to achieve more environmental benefits in their air program.

We received many helpful suggestions from Regions, states, and locals in the process of drafting the Compendium. We expect to periodically update the Compendium, and if you have additional examples or suggestions, please let us know. The main Compendium contact is George Wyeth at wyeth.george@epa.gov, in OECA. In the air program, please contact Juan Santiago, at santiago.juan@epa.gov.

We encourage EPA Regions and states to review these examples and consider how application of Next Generation Compliance tools could help you implement your programs in appropriate circumstances. We invite Regions, NACAA and AAPCA to distribute this further to the key players in each state and local air program. You can find the Compendium (along with compendia for other programs) at <https://www.epa.gov/compliance/compendia-next-generation-compliance-examples-water-air-waste-and-cleanup-programs>.

Thank you,
